

Josef Schoppig

Josef Schoppig received in Basel his basic and advanced education in social sciences and economics. He was awarded the licence diploma from the Basel University.

Mr. Schoppig has over nearly three decades of experience in managing and administering national and international trade associations in various industries. He is partner of AC-Fiduciaire Association Consultants a medium sized AMC (Association Management Company) based in Zurich. Before joining this company in 1987, Mr. Schoppig was occupied in various positions both in non-profit organisations and in industrial plants.

AC-Fiduciaire is an independent consulting company offering a full spectrum of services tailored to national and international associations and other non-profit organisations. The company is run by four managing partners with many years of experience in this speciality work. Trust, discretion, speed and continuity are the foundations of our business relations.

Mr. Schoppig is a sought-after specialist in the aluminium surface industry, and as such as manager of non-profit organisations like the quality label associations QUALICOAT, QUALANOD, QUALISTEELCOAT and QUALICOR. AC-Fiduciaire has achieved in 1997 the accreditation as a certification body for products of the aluminium industry in accordance with EN 45011.
